

In response to the upcoming legislation on the above referenced proceeding, I wish to state that the Indiana State Phone Privacy Law has afforded our household freedom from constant badgering from telemarketers at all hours. It is, in my opinion, a definite invasion of privacy in our own home. Since we are on a fixed income, we cannot afford Caller I.D. to stop this invasion. We do not contribute or buy from any telemarketers. It has been a pleasure to eat dinner and watch evening television without the interruption of these unwanted callers.
